

THE FIRST MISREADING

YOU MAY NOT BE REACTING TO THE WORLD.

YOU MAY BE REACTING
TO YOUR STATE.

INPUT	FIRST READING	POSSIBLE STATE
A short message	feels cold	sleep pressure
A meeting	feels dangerous	threat load
A craving	feels like a decision	cue training
A quiet room	feels like judgment	attention bias

We usually treat these moments as information about life:
the person, the task, the relationship, the day.

But the first reading is often not the whole story.

Before the mind explains, the body has already voted.

Sleep pressure, hunger, timing, attention, threat detection, memory, and prediction quietly shape what feels true.

Then the mind arrives second and gives that feeling a reason.
