

THE FIRST MISREADING

YOU MAY NOT BE REACTING TO THE WORLD. YOU MAY BE REACTING TO YOUR STATE.

A short message	feels cold.
A meeting	feels dangerous.
A craving	feels like a decision.
A quiet room	feels like judgement.

We often mistake a state for a fact. A person seems hostile. A task feels impossible. A relationship appears wrong. A whole day looks lost.

But what feels true is not produced by the situation alone. Sleep, hunger, stress, timing, attention, memory and threat detection affect what we notice and how we interpret it. Together, they shape the explanation that feels most convincing.

State. Not Situation. examines the gap between what happened and what it felt like it meant.

Ivana Budišin trained first to look, then to measure. With a background in design and later in clinical psychology, she is interested in what happens between an event and the certainty we build around it.

Her work brings research on attention, sleep, stress and bodily state into ordinary rooms, ordinary messages and ordinary mistakes. She lives and works in Luxembourg.

State. Not Situation. is her first book.

YOUR FIRST READING IS NOT THE WHOLE STORY.

Why your body decides what a moment means before you do

TIME • ATTENTION • SAFETY

STATE NOT SITUATION

YOUR BODY SPEAKS FIRST
YOUR MIND EXPLAINS SECOND

SAME LIFE. DIFFERENT INSTRUMENT SETTINGS.
